The foster/adoption world can often be a lonely one. It's nice to know there's someone in your corner, who's always there to support you. No matter what you go to Resources for, you're always greeted warmly, compassionately, and generously.

Even in the midst of a global pandemic, they found a way to continue serving while keeping their clientele and volunteers safe.

I would consider Resources of Hope a critical part of our ability to adequately care for the children placed in our home. Their support and resources they supply are invaluable. We've even been blessed with volunteers bringing supplies directly to our home upon initial placement when we were unable to get out. This is unprecedented in any other business. ~DK

We are new foster parents, so we were blessed recently by The Closet after our first placements arrived with very little. We had been told the first two weeks after a placement is a blur. I had no idea how true that was! You are trying to build a relationship with the kids and balance all of the appointments, phone calls, etc. Trying to go shopping those first few days would have been so overwhelming. Being able to fill out a form online with our needs and have a huge suitcase full of clothes and toys within 24 hours was AMAZING! It brought tears to my eyes as we opened the overflowing bag. The kids were thrilled and put on a fashion show with all their "new" outfits. As I sat there looking through all the clothes and toys that were such a blessing to our family, I was overwhelmed with the assurance that we are not in this alone. We have a village out there that we might never even meet, helping be the hands and feet of Jesus to kids in care. ~SW
